Nostalgic Design, Comfortable Space

MID-CENTURY MODERN DESIGN is very popular thanks to its clean, sophisticated lines combined with graphic patterns and quirky accents. Many homeowners are turning to this nostalgic design while adding modern touches to make it their own. "I like to design spaces that speak to the people who live there," says Debbie Clifton-Perez, Designer with Tweak Your Space. "The homeowners of this house were completely renovating. While we were walking around their house, they pointed out a painting to me and said that it was their favorite." The painting was hidden at the end of a long hallway so Clifton-Perez moved it to a more prominent, visible location in the living room and incorporated an orange color in the painting into her design.

Because the homeowners also wanted the home to have an organic, natural feel, Clifton-Perez pulled the other room colors from nature. The grey color of the European Oak wall is similar to the bark on the trees outside and the aqua teal accent color reflects the color of the pool.

Having a comfortable place to hang out may be one of the most important aspects of a living room and here the sectional sofa helps to delineate the open space and provides plenty of comfortable seating for family and friends. Both the arched lamp and the mid-century modern floor lamp can be adjusted to provide ambient light for an evening entertaining friends or brighter, close-up light for an evening of reading.
